MR Highlights: Even a cursory glance at the front pages of today's papers made it abundantly clear that the 'security situation' is the most critical issue of the day. Headlines such as "Troops, Militants Exchange Fire in Waziristan," (para 10), "Two Important Foreign Members of Al-Qaeda Arrested" (para 13), "Killing of Soldiers: Former Chief Minister of Balochistan Booked in the Case" (para 18) and "Cop Picked up from Punjab Chief Minister's Residence for Links with Al-Qaeda" (para 21) completely dominated the news pages of every major daily. Today's stories also indicate that the security-related public concern may soon move away from Waziristan and focus more closely on the happenings in Balochistan.

The question of whether or not Pakistani troops will be deployed in Iraq continued to remain a dominant topic on both news and editorial pages. Prime Minister Shujaat Hussain and Information Minister Sheikh Rashid were quoted as saying "No Troops to Iraq Against Public Opinion" (paras 23-24). However, center-right Urdu daily "Pakistan" went back to the Foreign Office announcement which said "Troops Will Not be Sent Under Present Circumstance" and asked the government to clarify the issue. "Iraq Policy: Government Should Get Rid of Confusion" (para 31).

National Security Advisor Condoleezza Rice's "gratitude" (NBC interview remarks) towards Pakistan "for providing terrorism intelligence" made to the front-pages as well (Para 4).

Two Federal Ministers came in for some harsh editorial criticism for "issuing contradictory statements" over the arrest of an al-Qaeda operative in Pakistan. Yesterday's papers reported two totally opposite versions on the arrest of an Al-Qaeda terrorist -- Information Minister said that an important terrorist had been arrested while the Interior Minister contradicted his cabinet colleague's claim. "The News" cautioned the Ministers to "comment with care so that no misunderstanding is created in the minds of the people" (para 28). End highlights.

-- Campaign Against Terrorism

27. "Speak With One Voice!," an editorial in the Lahore-based liberal English daily, "Daily Times" (08/04)

UNCLASSIFIED

UNCLASSIFIED

Quote: The Interior Minister, Mr. Faisal Saleh Hayat, and the Information Minister, Sheikh Rashid Ahmad, have apparently issued two contradictory statements over the arrest of Al-Qaeda member Ahmad Khalfan Ghailani from Gujrat on 25 July.... This cuts two ways. It hamstringing whatever we may be pursuing with the arrested agents, but it also erodes the deniability of Al-Qaeda's presence in Pakistan. Pakistan's vernacular press began by denying the existence of the terrorist organization. The reflex was inherited from the days when Pakistan was supportive of the Taliban government in Afghanistan and was not hostile towards Usama bin Laden. Then, under external pressure, the agents of Al-Qaeda began to be arrested inside Pakistan after 2001. The government accepted the pressure but the vernacular media in general resented it, denying terrorist connections of those arrested. In 2004, however, things are different in Pakistan. We know now who Ramzi bin al-Shibh was; and when it came to denying Nek Muhammad this year, we found it difficult to do so. The best course therefore would be to speak with one voice through one spokesman on all official matters related to giving information to the media and the public about Al-Qaeda terrorism. End quote.

28. "Ministers' Statements Need Semblance," an editorial in the centrist national English daily, "The News" (08/04)

Quote: ... Consequently while politicians may benefit from the restiveness caused in the nation it runs against national interests and also misleads the people. The international situation is compelling us to seriously ponder about peace in the country and safety of people's life and property and ensuring the nation that Pakistan is a sovereign and stable state. Creating doubts about this is not an act of patriotism. It is important that President Musharraf takes note of this and issues instructions that only an authorized person should speak on all issues including terrorism and provincial and regional matters. These persons should comment with care and patience after considering all aspects of an issue so that no misunderstanding is created in the minds of the people. End quote.

29. "Balochistan CM Attacked?," an editorial in the center-right national English daily, "The Nation" (08/04)

UNCLASSIFIED

UNCLASSIFIED

Quote: Coming close on the heels of an assassination attempt on Mr. Shaukat Aziz, which claimed eight lives while more than 50 persons were injured, the attack on Balochistan CM Jam Yousaf on Monday points to the government's failure to come to grips with growing terrorism.... While the entire country is in the grip of growing lawlessness, Balochistan has been bleeding for some time; and it is now difficult to keep the count of the terrorist acts occurring there in the recent past.... Every time a life is lost, both the federal and provincial governments pass the buck on to 'foreign hands' as if they are to protect the citizens from domestic miscreants alone. The Interior Minister transferred the IG Balochistan only after the killing of foreigners, but that has not improved matters. It is time the government allayed prevalent sense of alienation in Balochistan, lest it develop into a Darfur and become the focus of unwelcome world attention. End quote.

30. "America's Enemies, Our Enemies," an editorial in the Karachi-based, right-wing, pro-Islamic unity Urdu daily, "Jasarat" (08/04)

Quote: A computer expert has reportedly been arrested from Pakistan who is alleged to be in possession of several blue prints to attack the U.S. The point is that those who want to attack some place do not make its blue prints by sitting thousands of miles away from the target. This the U.S. also understands but it wants to exploit the situation to its benefit and the government of Pakistan is fully cooperating with the U.S. President Musharraf has already stated that Wana is the headquarter of Al-Qaeda; since most of the major Al-Qaeda leaders have been arrested from here. And now a Pakistani engineer has been arrested with plans to attack U.S. This tantamount to getting an FIR registered against ourselves and inviting the U.S. to come and nab its enemies. Our rulers must know that those who are the enemies of the United States are not necessarily our enemies. But our government is treating as enemy anybody who has been declared as such by the United States. End quote.

-- Iraq: Foreign Troops

31. "Iraq Policy: Government should Get Rid of Confusion," an editorial in the center-right Urdu daily "Pakistan" (08/04)

UNCLASSIFIED

UNCLASSIFIED

Quote: The Foreign Office spokesperson has said that Pakistani troops can't be sent to Iraq in the current precarious situation. It would have been better if the spokesperson had outlined the conditions that could allow deployment of troops in Iraq. What would be the utility of the troops if peace is established in that country? Would any section of the Iraqi population ever accept presence of Pakistan troops? What are the advantages of deploying troops in Iraq, and what are the downsides of not doing so.... Saudi Arabia had requested Islamic countries to send troops to Iraq, but the request did not materialize.... Pakistan troops have sacrificed their lives from Somalia to Sierra Leon, under the UN banner. Pakistan can side with the international community in Iraq in an honorable way, but first it should think over the pros and cons of this decision. When Spain and Philippine have withdrawn their troops from Iraq and Russia, Germany, France and dozens of other countries are not willing to make their soldiers sacrificial goats, why are we confused? End quote.

-- India-Pakistan Relations

32. "Belated Thinking," an editorial in the center-right national English daily, "The Nation" (08/04)

Quote: ... It sounds pretty odd that our leaders should, at this stage, be asking India to fix a 'timeframe' to settle the Kashmir dispute after having introduced a whole range of CBMs that New Delhi had been wanting us to take. Pakistan should have made the introduction of CBMs conditional on the acceptance of this point by India.... India's attitude does not bode well for the future of harmonious relations between the two countries. It hardly presages an approach flexible enough to come to a settlement on the core contention. Let alone resolving it through a plebiscite as the Kashmiri leaders demanded, it is not willing to make them a party to the dialogue process. A radical rethink of our policy that makes Kashmir the issue of first priority is called for. End quote.

-- Sudan: Darfur Crisis

33. "Darfur Crisis," an editorial in the center-right national English daily, "The Nation" (08/04)

UNCLASSIFIED

UNCLASSIFIED

Quote: ... National sovereignty might not mean permission to commit atrocities while the world watches on, but it should imply non-interference. The Sudanese government should not forget that it is a military dictatorship, and thus its legitimacy for its own people is suspect. This may well mean that its ability to resist intervention is more limited than a democracy's. The Sudanese government has generally maintained an anti-U.S. posture, and it should have noted that its weakness would be exploited ruthlessly. There is a lesson in this for all Third World states, especially Muslim ones, with weak unrepresentative regimes. End quote.

34. "Is There Hope For Darfur?," an editorial in the Karachi-based center-left independent national English daily, "Dawn" (08/04)

Quote: ... If the killings don't stop within days, intervention - hopefully with Khartoum's acquiescence - would be advisable. The African Union should be able to put together a sufficiently large force for the purpose. If not, the UN could step in. But not as a proxy for another Anglo-American neocolonial adventure. U.S. troops would be hopelessly out of depth amid the complexities of Sudan, and would probably exacerbate the problem. And Europeans have done too much damage in Africa to qualify as saviors.... Were American forces to be deployed in Darfur, they would logically look upon the SLA and JEM as allies. The JEM enjoys the blessings of Sudanese Islamist leader Hassan Al Turabi. And Turabi was a friend of Usama bin Laden. That could conceivably put the U.S. on broadly the same side as the Al-Qaeda chief. Not for the first time, though. End quote.

35. "What would be the Fate of Poor and Backward Countries?" an editorial note in the second largest Urdu daily "Nawa-e-Waqt" (08/04)

Quote: The WTO dialogue in Geneva has resulted in a treaty under which the developed countries would withdraw subsidies on their exports.... WTO wants to end whatever industrial and economic capability developing or backward countries have and want to turn these countries into open markets for multi-national companies and developed countries.... The developing

This so called organization of trade and commerce is bent upon destroying Pakistan's economic capability or whatever left of it. The foreign products would be cheaper, but at the cost of our industry. Presently the unemployment is 41 percent, which is bound to increase after WTO proposals implementation. What would the fate of these unemployed people? Still our educated trade minister says that the implementation of the WTO proposal would bring profit of billions of dollars. End quote. Powell
